

Cleveland Pools Trust

Developing research and writing interpretation skills

Free workshops

Would you like to develop your historical research and interpretation skills?

The Cleveland Pools Trust are offering a short series of interactive training workshops to promote learning in relation to:

- Understanding the value of social history
- Shaping your historical research and identifying research sources
- Accessing research sources, exploring one or two in more depth
- Writing Interpretation content or 'telling the story'

The workshops are free of charge and are open to staff, members and volunteers of history and heritage groups and organisations in Bath. They will last for around an hour and will take place on the 6th, 13th and 20th of May at 10am at the Percy Community Centre, New King St, Bath, BA1 2BN.

The workshop leaders are Professor June Hannam and Dr Linda Watts, supported by Heritage Management MA student, Beth Wilson.

If you and/or anyone else in your group is interested in taking part in the workshops, please contact Beth for further information at elizabeth.wilson21@bathspa.ac.uk
